ALEXANDRIA, VA., FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1877.

1877.

THE ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE and VIRGINIA ADVERTISER, already read by three generations, proposes to continue its useful life, and now enters into another volume determined to be the newspaper of the era in Never have the times demanded more than now sound, thoughtful journalism. Seldom nave the people had deeper interests at stake. Never did the events of the hour, as they untola themselves, surpass in personal interest to every citizen those which are now transpiring. Never has the importance of early, authentic intelligence of public matters been of greater importance to every one.

To meet this new era in journalism, the Ga-ZETTE will put forth its utmost endeavor, and its success during this entire century in catering to the wants and meeting the wishes of the people, guarantees that with this paper promise means performance.

Washington is now the point to which all eyes look and all ears are directed. Almost at the base of the Capital, and yet in a Virginia town, amid a community which has proved its faithfulness to Virginia in more than one nery trial; surrounded by the traditions and hopes of the Commonwealth, the GAZETTE has a position unique among journals and promises to be worthy of it. Its contiguity to Washington gives it an early precedence over all the journals of the State in intelligence of the operations of the General Government, now of such vital importance to the people of the South. The proceedings of Congress, seldom so interesting as now, will be regularly reported in succinct form for its columns, but all matters of especial interest in Virginia will be given in detail. Two gentlemen connected with the paper ure constantly at the Federal capital, and the Washington news of the Gazette has for a long time been the fountain of Washington news for the

As the interests of the people mainly ceptre a home, no pains will be spared to chronicle al matters occurring in the city and neighborhood carefully excluding unseemly expressions or gross narrative as unfit for a journal that is treasured at many thousand hearthstones of

been to advance the interests of the people of whose life it is the daily chronicle. Its fortunes have been their fortunes; it has shared their prosperity and suffered in their disasters. Its inspiration has been the desire to forward the best interests of the community in which it is located, and its own prosperity is, as it has been purposely made, inseparable from that of the to work with them and for them, expecting to make their success the measure of its own.

COLIC AND GRUBBS IN HORSES. Having had during the last twenty years of my life to attend to Racing Stock, and having had so much trouble with them with Colic. Grubbs, &c., gave me a great deal of trouble. Having heard of your Regulator as a cure for the above diseases, I concluded to try it. After trying one PACKAGE IN MASH I found it to cure in every instance. It is only to be tried to prove what I have said in its praise. I can send you certificates from Augusta, Clinton and Macon, as to the cure of horse.

A Demented Godiva.

The freezing wind whistled spitefully around he corners of the houses on Prince street, near Mott, yesterday morning, between seven and eight o'clock, and Officer Scilbelt, of the Fourteenth precinct, as he patrolled his post, buttoned his coat tightly and looked longingly for his expected relief from duty. To say, therefore, that he was astonished at seeing a woman two blocks distant walking along the street en tirely devoid of clothing, but faintly expresses his feelings. Yet, sure enough, there, before his eyes, was a young woman as nude as Lady Godiva in her historic ride through Coventry.

Seilbelt pinched his arm to assure himself that he was not dreaming, and becoming satisfied on that point, clutched his club and hurried after the figure. She saw him coming and ran, but he, more sprightly, was soon by her side. Charitably throwing his overcoat around her shivering form, he took her into a neighboring grocery. Here, while he procured suitable clothing, he learned that she was a poor insane woman, Annie White, who lived at No. 56 Prince street. He conveyed her home and found that she had only recently been released from the Insane Asylum on Blackwell's Island where she had been coufined three months. Her insanity was the result of long continued illness. The unfortunate young woman, he learned, was thirty-five years of age and by occupation a bookfolder. She resided with her aged father, who, strange to relate, was also insane. Both lived happily together, harmless in their madness, supported by a few relatives. Only an hour before being found in the street she had arisen and called her father, to whom she said that she had determined to go once more into the world. Soon afterward she divested herself of all clothing, and, shouting 'send for a priest !" hastened into the street. A lady living on the first floor heard the request and hurried for Father Kearney, who was present when the efficer arrived.

ture to the Tombs and placed her in Judge Duffy's reception room to await his disposition of other cases, leaving her in charge of officer McGowan. Now officer McGowan had patrolled for hours and hours the night previous and was very, very sleepy. So he dropped into an easy chair and wished he was in bed. Slowly his eyelids began to close and fitfully his head began to

nod, and in five minutes the guardian of the peace was in dreamland. The insane woman watched her keeper with the proverbial cunning of her kind, and finding him sound asleep silently opened the door leading to the sanetum adjoining the court, and then soltly stole through the door which opens on the judicial bench, taking up her position about five feet in the rear of Judge Duffy and facing the court room. She looked, indeed, like a spectre. A long black cloak, with hood attached, enveloped her from head to foot, with only a small opening at the face, which revealed a ghastly and emaciated countenance. Her eyes looked wild and haggard and wierdly started from their sockets; her compressed lips were livid, and her elevated arm and long pointing finger gave her the appearance of one risen from the grave. She steed silent and impas sive as a marble statue. The court room contained at the time only about a dozen persons beside the court actend ants and officers. The former were lolling lazily, paying but little attention to the proceedings, and the latter were occupied, each at his accustomed duty. Judge Duffy was busily engaged signing commitments, and the various clerks had their faces close to their desks scribbling at a furious rate. But one person noticed the strange woman as she stood behind the Judge's chair. A poor, degenerate and ragged rum drinker. whose nose resembled a railroad danger light, stood clinging to the iron rail and facing the Judge. He was awaiting sentence for having been found in the gutter the night previous grossly intoxicated. His blinking eyes first saw her. He gasped as he caught sight of the apparition; his teeth began to chatter and his knees to shake. Judge Duffy looked up from his writing a mament to pity the poor wretch prior to committing him to the Island, and. noticing his trembling manner, said, kindly :-

"Well, John, haven't you yet got over your A hollow, sepulchral voice syllabled through the court room: "Disgraced! Disgraced! Disgraced! Forever and forever damaed! The voice appeared to come from the further end of the court room, near the main entrance, and all eyes were instantly turned in that di Judge Duffy lifted his head in astonishment and east a black look at Sergeant Black, who in turn secwied at Officer Kush, who looked inquiringly at another officer, who applogetically rapped on a bench with his knife and threw a meaning glance at an urebin near the door, as he shouted :-"Order in the court." But one man knew whence the words came.

The poer, ragged druckard grew whiter and whiter as he gazed at the spectre. The excitement soon subsided, and the Court proceeded to business. "John, you were found last night lying miserably drunk in a ----'

Again came the voice, but louder than be "Saved! saved! saved! and saved by a woman's hand!' The shivering wretch at the bar convulsively clutched an officer's coat, and pointing at the motionless apparition shricked :-"My God! I've got 'em again!-I've got em again! Take me away from her!-take me away from her! Judge Duffy jumps from his seat in dismay.

The audience arise as one person. The clerks drop their pens, and turn pale as they look around. They rush for the railing. Judge Duffy stands for a moment horrified, but the dignity of the Court comes to his rescue and he grasps the ghost and hurries her into the reception room. Then, breathless, he seeks explanation. The sleeping officer awakens, looks sheepish and explains all, and the unfortunate woman is hastily committed to the tender mercies of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction .- New York Herald.
